

Internship Portfolio

Curaçao Sotheby's International Realty

Portfolio Overview

This internship portfolio presents Sayina Attaf's learning and contributions during her placement at Curaçao Sotheby's International Realty. The work combines marketing support, research, content creation, professional development, and reflective learning.

Main Responsibilities

- Supporting marketing activities for luxury real estate listings.
- Creating and improving social media content.
- Researching visibility, competitor activity, and audience engagement.
- Contributing to campaign ideas for LinkedIn, Instagram, Facebook, and TikTok.
- Working with colleagues and adapting communication to a professional environment.

Key Projects

- Visibility tracker to identify listings that had not been promoted recently.
- LinkedIn series: 'What's One Thing You Wish You Knew...'
- Instagram and Facebook series: 'Monday Spotlight'.
- Marketing plans for selected listings that required additional exposure.
- Initial TikTok strategy and competitor research.

Learning Outcomes

The internship strengthened skills in initiative, research, communication, creativity, planning, and professional responsibility. It also provided insight into how a premium international real estate brand protects quality and consistency across communication channels.

Reflection

A major learning point was that strong ideas must be supported by planning, evidence, and collaboration. Creative work creates value when it is connected to business goals and implemented consistently.

Professional Growth

- More confidence in presenting ideas.
- Stronger understanding of luxury brand positioning.
- Improved ability to turn research into practical recommendations.

- Better awareness of personal strengths in creativity and campaign development.

Conclusion

The internship connected academic learning with real business practice and helped clarify future career interests in marketing, international business, and creative strategy.
